Alabama Volunteers Attend National Conference

On June 18-21, 2006 the “Community Forestry At Its Best National Conference” was held in Nebraska City, Nebraska. Alabama was well represented with 21 volunteers from all over the state. Attendees included various community leaders such as Mayors, urban foresters, tree board members, city clerks, community tree volunteers, and many others who were interested in the care of community trees. Attendees at the conference were provided with important information to those working in existing Tree City USA communities who are trying to grow and maintain their urban forestry programs. Community Forestry At Its Best provided a national forum to strengthen cooperation and the exchange of ideas among all members of the urban forestry community. This learning experience was sponsored by the Alabama Cooperative Extension System.
