GREEN LIVING EXPO 2011

Featuring Urban Gardens

Purpose

The Green Living Expo, formerly the Urban-Rural Interface Conference, is designed to educate participants on being eco-friendly consumers. The Green Living Expo strives to:

- Increase the capacity of urban communities to respond to green living issues through engaged partnerships.
- Educate consumers, businesses, and organizations on how to become "eco-friendly!"
- Provide information on green-living programs and other resources.

Participants will enjoy a free lunch, door prizes, and entertainment, and participate in live urban gardening demonstrations.

Research has proven that gardens contribute to our well-being and are becoming widely recognized by health and community professionals for their economic value, their ability to reduce food insecurities, to increase physical activity, and to promote neighborhood interactions.

- Attendance is FREE
- Exhibitors will have an opportunity to showcase their products and services.
- Exhibitors are asked to provide a door prize (minimum $20 value) OR pay an exhibit set up fee of $25.

Lunch will be served during the Green Living Expo!

Partner:  Sparkman Dr.

Who Should Come?

The Green Living Expo is open to consumers, local businesses, and public and private organizations, including the general public, educators, students, environmental service providers, public officials, and other parties interested in green-living resources.
