What is PCREP?

PCREP is the acronym for Parent-Child Reading Enhancement Program. The PCREP program builds parental teaching skills over five, one-hour classes. Additionally, the program provides tools and resources that can be used when teaching children to read.

Who is PCREP for?

PCREP was developed to support parents, guardians & caregivers of children ages 4–6. Alabama Extension understands that parents have limited time. PCREP addresses this by creating activities that combine learning with quality time. PCREP techniques can give beginning readers a solid start and struggling readers needed support. Advanced readers can benefit from program techniques by fostering a love of reading and expanding comprehension.

How much does PCREP cost?

The PCREP program is absolutely free and classes are offered throughout the calendar year.

What other programs does Alabama Extension offer?

Alabama Extension has a wide range of programs for youth, adults, older adults and families. Visit our website and discover health & nutrition, financial management, youth development, career building skills, and lawn & garden.
Learning to read doesn't have to be a struggle for children or their parents.

Parents know when their child is struggling with reading, but they may not know how to help. PCREP is here to provide the tools needed to improve your child's reading.

We want to turn reading time into quality family time that everyone can enjoy.
